that David Martin had been appointed to succeed him was received in this city with surprise. Since the political upheaval re-cently inaugurated by Mayor Weaver there has been a general demand by tlergymen

religious and other organizations for Mr

Durham's resignation, the allegation being made that the insurance commissioner had paid little or no attention to the duties of n optimistic character. After an absence of about three months Mr. Hay returned to the United States, apparently considerably improved in health. He remained several days in the vicinity of New York at the home of a daughter, and came to Washington last week-Mon-day. While here he spent some time at the State Department, and had several inter-views with the President, in which he discussed important pending questions.

It was just a week ago today, after a week of work at the State Department, that he said good-bye to his friends here left for his summer home in New Hampshire, "there to spend a quiet and restful summer," as he expressed it to one of his associates in the State Department. He was not optimistic about his health, though he did believe himself greatly improved by his trip to Europe

"I have not had such a reception since the early winter," he remarked as he re-turned to his private office, "and it has been so pleasant to greet my friends

CABINET EXPRESSIONS.

Praise From the Associates of the Late Secretary of State. Acting Secretary Peirce formally notified the members of the cabinet of the death of Mr. Hay, and is awaiting instructions from the President with reference to any arrangements that are to be made.

Postmaster General Cortelyou on being informed of Secretary Hay's death said: "John Hay lived to see the successful results of many of the great policies with which he had so much to do. Few men have come to high station with finer equipment for public service. He was one of the most lovable of men and his loss will be keenly felt by his colleagues, who will always recall the simplicity and dignity of his character and the genuineness of the man in all their relations with him. History will place his name among the great Americans who have contributed in arge degree to their country's glory and rosperity." Secretary Hitchcock of the Interior De-

I had fully appreciated the serious haracter of his illness, but nothing made public recently led me to think his condition critical. His abilities and services as a statesman and his virtues as a cititen and a man are so universally recognized that any reference to them now would be superfluous. ACTION OF COMMISSIONERS.

Adopted an Expression of Their Profound Regret.

The Commissioners of the District of Columbia, upon the motion of Commissioner Macfarland, today adopted the following minute in memory of Secretary Hay:

"The Commissioners of the District of Columbia learn with profound regret of the death of the Hon. John Hay of the District of Columbia, Secretary of State, at his summer home in New Hampshire last night. Washington was not only the scene of his greatest achievements, but his home for many years. SENATOR CULLOM'S TRIBUTE.

Pronounces the Secretary the Foremost Diplomat of His Times.

Senator Cullom, chairman of the Senate mmittee on foreign relations feels a peculiar sadness in the death of Secretary Hay. As a young man Secretary Hay was a student in the law office of Cullom & Hay, the latter his uncle. Senator Cullom said: "I do not know when I have been so shocked as I was this morning on being twakened and told that Secretary Hay was lead. I have long regarded Mr. Hay as one of the greatest men in our country, especially in all diplomatic directions. He was, as I think, the foremost diplomat of the times.

"I have known Mr. Hay from his boy-hood. When Mr. Lincoln left Illion's for Washington to assume the responsibilities as President of the United States he took John Hay and J. J. Nicolay with him from Springfield, Ill. Mr. Hay was a student in the office of Hay & Cuilom, Hay being his made and one of the ablest lawyers in the ing his appointment and stating that I regarded him as the best man in the country for the position. He proved himself to be so. Not only was he a great diplomat in the interests of the United States, but he had become, before his illness, the leading diplomat of the nations, especially in regard to matters in the east. His death works a great loss to the country. Personally 1 mourn his death more than 1 have words to express."

"DIPLOMACY OF TRUTH."

Minister Barrett Characterizes Secretary Hay's Standing.

Mr. John Barrett, minister to Colombia and formerly minister to Panama, said: "The death of Secretary Hay comes as great shock to those of us in the diplomatic service who have long served him as our chief. If I were to make special mention of any particular one of his many qualifications as a great Secretary of State I would emphasize the fact that he always impressed upon us the necessity of exercising perfect honesty, truth and fairness in our dealings with foreign nations. He was a great example of the successful workings of the diplomacy of truth. Mr. Hay not only was eminently patriotic and zealous in the protection of American interests in foreign lands, but he instructed all ministers, especially those accredited to lesser nations, to be thoroughly considerate interests of the latter and deferential to their own sentiments of right and wrong, Except the President, no American states man was better known or more respected abroad.

"In Asia and in South and Central America, where it was my honor to serve under him, his name stood for all that is best in international diplomacy. For instance, I often heard President Amador of Panama say that the Interests of the Latin countries were sure to be safely guarded as long as Mr. Hay was Secretary of State. He took, moreover, a personal concern in the welfare and success of all members of the diplomatic service, and won their affection and loyalty by his generosity of admoni-tion and kindness of advice and treat-

Many Calls of Condolence.

Nearly every embassy and legation in Washington was represented in the list of callers at the State Department today to express regret and condolence over the death of Secretary Hay. Among the first of the ambassadors to call was Senor Mayor des Planches, the Italian ambassador; the others calling later in the day. Mr. Vogel, the Swiss minister, and Senor Rivero, charge of the Cuban legation, were also among the early callers.

The Secretary's Desk Draped.

A pathetic feature of the day at the State Department was the draping of the large square desk and chair in the office of the Secretary of State that had been used by Secretary Hay since his appointment to the cabinet of President McKinley. That tribute of respect was paid by direction of Acting Secretary Peirce and was the only physical symbol of sorrow dis-played in the department outside of the half-masting of the flag. The draping of public buildings in mourning, such as was the custom in years gone by on the death of a member of the cabinet, is now prohibited by statute and the covering of the desk and chair in somber black was the only action of the kind that could be taken.

Admired by Cassini.

Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador, and dean of the diplomatic corps, received shortly after noon the official notice from the State Department announcing Secretary Hay's death. The ambassador later in the day will communicate the news to his colleagues, though, of course, this al-ready has been done by the State Department, the acting secretary, Mr. Pe rce, having addressed a note to each ambassador. minister and charge d'affaires in Washing-

"Aside from his great ability, his experience, his profound knowledge of international law and diplomacy, Mr. Hay had that charm of manner, that delicacy of feeling, which made him the ideal diplomatist. Commissioner Warner's Praise.

Commissioner Vespasian Warner of the pension bureau said he regarded Secretary Hay as one of the greatest statesmen this country has ever produced. TWO WOMEN MURDERED.

Brutal Work of a Supposed Negro Murderer at Scranton.

SCRANTON, Pa., July 1.-Mrs. May Jay and Mary Woodling, white women, were murdered in their rooms at their home in the Center street tenderloin some time during yesterday. Their bodies were found today by the police officials who had been called to the scene by a Pullman car porter named Elwell, who had a room in the same building.

When Elwell came home today he found the door of the house locked, and being unable to gain admission he notified the police officials. When the latter forced their way into the room a horrible sight met their saze. Lying upon their hedge their way into the room a horrible sight met their gaze. Lying upon their beds with their heads beaten to a pulp were the bodies of the two women. The furniture, bedding and walls of the rooms were literally covered with blood. Both bodies were partly clothed, the murderer having apparently gone into the rooms while the women slept. The weapon used was an ax and the murderer after committing the terrible crime hid the ax in a closet in the kitchen of the dwelling.

That robbery was not the motive for the crime was established when all of the jeweiry belonging to the women were found in their rooms. There was also a sum of money in the room occupied by the Jay women, which was undisturbed.

The floor beneath the one occupied by women, which was undisturbed.

The floor beneath the one occupied by the women was used by the Eighth Ward Republican club, a colored organization, and the one above them by a colored family named Dodge.

The police officials are of the opinion that the murders were committed by some one familiar with the premises and give as their reason for this suspicion that a stranger would not have taken the precaution to carry the ax into the kitchen and conceal it.

YEAR REWARDS

Numerous Clerical Promotions Announced.

TWO DIVISION CHIEFS

SIX HUNDRED CHANGES IN THE PENSION BUREAU.

Many Advancements Made in the Patent Office-Recognition of Faithful Service.

The new fiscal year brought with it many changes in the Interior Department. In two bureaus of the department at least there were numbers of promotions and appointments. in the pension office alone there were more than 600 changes.

In the pension office the decrease in certain branches of the work caused Congress to authorize the cutting off of twenty-five out of the 150 special examiners employed by the office. These special examiners do not hold regular clerkships, but are appointed for terms of one year. In the patent office two new chiefs of division were appointed. In both instances the positions went to old employes of the office. Mr. W. W. Mortimer, for many years regarded as one of the most valuable employes of the office, has been given the title and pay of chief of division. He has been in charge of one of the important divisions of the office more than a year and a half, but the commissioner could not authorize his appointment as a chief of division with the pay thereof until today. Mr. Mortimer is charge of the division of photo-lithography, which has complete control of all the photo-lithographic work of the office. He is a practical draftsman and has performed every class of service in the patent office. He was an officer in the famous National Fencibles during their palmy days, and as such materially assisted them to be the best-drilled military organization in the United States.

Another old member of the Fencibles, Mr. Alexander Mosher, was appointed a chief of division in the patent office today. Like Mr. Mortimer, Mr. Mosher has been in charge of his division for a number of months, but has not been able to wear the official title because of the fallure of Congress to provide for another chief in the office of the commissioner of patents up to the present time. Mr. Mosher's division has charge of the copy sales, and he is accredited with having introduced a system into the filing of copies of patents whereby a patent can be found when it is wanted within an unusually short space of time. Both these positions pay $2,000 a year. The other promotions in the patent office fol-

PUNISHED FOR ASSAULT.

William Boldin Sent to Jail, His Brother Forfeits Collateral.

The final chapter in the assault on Mr. and Mrs. Christian Nellson, at their farm house near the District line in the northwest section of the city, was enacted today in the Police Court, when two more of the employes were before the court to answer to the charge. On Thursday John Bolden was in court on two charges of assault on Mr. and Mrs. Neilson, and was sentenced to a year in the District jail.

Warrants were out at that time for his two brothers, alleged to have assisted in the assault, and were in the hands of Precinct Detective Estes of the tenth precinct station. He traced them into Maryland, and yesterday placed Joseph and William Bolden under arrest.

Joseph Bolden, when taken to the station, gave $50 collateral for his appearance in the Police Court this morning. When his name was called by Bailiff Graham today there was no response, and the $50 was declared forfeited.
